The bachelor thesis deals with children's drawings, its development, historical context and the connection with mental development of the child, colors' interpretation and their symbols. Work verified diagnostic possibilities of children's kinetic artwork while recognizing how children see and assess nurse profession. Test group consisted of 60 children between 8 and 10 years. Children's drawings were supplemented by interviews with children about their drawing. Following key aspects were used for drawings analysis: the look of nurses, the look of child and surgery environment. The results show that children have a clear idea about the nurse profession, what nurse job represents and what clothes they wear at work. Children describe nurses and their profession mostly positive.
