The thesis is focusing on communication with the dying patient in an intensive care from the nurse perspective. Thesis consists of two main parts, theoretical and practical. Theoretical part describes the various components of general communication and communication and specifics of the dying patient. This part also describes problems of dying in intensive care. Theoretical part also focuses on ethical problems that can be communicated with the dying patient.

The empirical part focuses on the detection of communication and nurses' emotional skills in communication with the dying patient. The focus of the thesis is quantitative research, reached by an anonymous questionnaire. The research sample consisted of nurses working in the intensive care unit. Based on the analysis of the research, difficulties and suggested solutions in communicating with dying patients were identified.
