

This study is concerned with the influence that multinational corporations might bring to the labor market in developing countries and discuss the positive or negative aspects of their presence at the particular markets. It is focused on questions about FDI inflows into developing countries, wages and their comparison with domestic firms on labor market, as well as on the legislative framework of the working conditions in the developing countries.