

The work deals with the role of social activation services for families with children in the prevention of risky behaviour in children and youth. The aim is to explore whether social activation services for families with children have an impact on the prevention of risky behaviour among children and youth. The theoretical part deals with factors affecting the incidence of risky behaviour among adolescents. Most of the attention is paid to the family. The practical part consists of information obtained from employees of various social services in Litomyšl and Ústí nad Orlicí. It is a summary of their ideas and experience in working with families. At the same time answers to the research question are given.