

Abstract

The diploma work „Evaluation of the impact of welfare reform in the area of non-insurance social welfare“ is about one of the parts of Social Security in the Czech Republic about area of benefits whose claim is not conditional on participation in insurance. The focus is on the legislative creation and organizational structure ensuring this instrument of the social policy. Because of it the basic of the diploma work is the creation of the political processes, mainly their implementation and evaluation. There are characterized the development and current status of state social assistance, material poverty and benefits for people with disabilities.

An analyze of legislative changes that this area has undergone in the context of social reform which started in 2011 is the part of the diploma work. There is the characterization of the process of implementation reforms into practice and it is made their evaluation in the connection with the organization, technical support and legitimacy benefits systems.

Resources for diploma work were a combination of primary and secondary data. The base is consisting mainly from professional literature and the relevant legislation. Actual information in which are considered changes is taken from press releases, time series and conclusion from the survey. The methods which were used are institutional analysis, study of the case files, observation, and evaluation. A part of the evaluation is a survey realized by the staff of the Labour Office of the Czech Republic. In the diploma work is made a reflection of reforms in terms of its preparedness, implementation and evaluation of achievements. The reflection is based on the determination of implicit and explicit reflection of the reforms steps.