

Summary

Thesis with the topic "Types of action in The Civil Process"

The objective of the thesis with the topic "Types of action in The Civil Process" is to offer a comprehensive view of the positive treatment of various types of action in the Czech civil procedural law. The action is a significant procedural institution, which is considered a universal means of protection of rights, and in both theory and practice it is treated with due importance. The thesis is divided in eleven chapters. In the first half, I define general characteristics of the action and its legal effects; in the second, I deal with the individual types of action in detail and analyse their specifics by means of a detailed of the literature and case law review method.
