

The target of this work is an analysis of the diplomatic attitude of Aznar's governments (1996 - 2000 and 2000 - 2004) towards the traditional regions of Spanish diplomacy - Europe, United States of America, Mediterranean and also the states of North Africa and Latin America. The goal of this work is not to provide a compact overview of interrelationships and politics towards these regions but to track down the basic principles of a style and priorities of Aznar's diplomacy.