

This bachelor thesis deals with a problem of definition of the term information and of the information science. Information science is related to the interpretation of the information very closely. This paper shows the four main approaches to the subject of information science. Those approaches are philosophical, computer, biological and cybernetic. This allows to make an all-around image of the range of this subject and it also points out the need of further specification of this field of study.