

Abstract:

This bachelor's thesis focuses on political advertising in the Czech Republic. Based on the collected material its aim is to analyse and to depict language means of persuasion, which are used in advertising campaigns of different political parties. The topic of political advertising is being approached from the point of political discourse as well as the discourse of advertising.