

Designed as a comparative study, this master's thesis aims to contrast some of the classic political philosophy thinkers with Hannah Arendt's thought on civil society in order to present what makes her theories new and beneficial for the further development of civil society. By analysing some of the ideas of the representatives of different trends it introduces to what degree they influenced their followers, opponents and Hannah Arendt's thought.