

The paper presents introduction to spatial point processes and their characteristics. The reader is familiar with Poisson point process, which plays fundamental role in the theory of point processes. Basic properties and summary statistics are introduced with nonparametric estimations. The work is concluded by example of the point process including estimations of some characteristics.