

The goal of this thesis is to create the tool for translation of Java 1.5 source code to output C++ code on the assumption that input source code is able to be compiled. Part of this thesis is the proposal of method, which leads to translation, as well as analyze of Java constructs, which cannot be translated automatically to efficient C++ output. Implementation of translator uses parsing mechanism based upon Java grammar specification, extensible for additional modules.