

ABSTRACT

This thesis deals with the evaluation in the civil sector in Czech Republic. Its main goal is to describe actual state of evaluation in the connection with civil sector. It submits its definitions, typologies, methods and principles from the both – Anglo – Saxon and Czech environment. This work also contains the analysis of interviews with professional evaluators who have experience with the evaluation of civil sector organizations and with representatives of civil sector organizations that have evaluation practice. The author describes evaluation in the context of the transformation of Czech civil sector, its professionalization and the crisis of resources for its organizations.