

A traffic model of a roundabout is considered. It can be classified as a follow-the-leader model. The solution may not be unique. Apart from a constant velocity solution there may exist particular oscillatory regimes called cycles. They are due to the Hopf bifurcation from the constant velocity solutions. The aim is to reproduce the numerical experiments of [5]: We used different continuation software. We observe that not all cycles detected are physical.