

Abstract

The aim of this work is to give a comprehensive overview of the financial and legal aspects of the fight against money laundering in the Czech Republic and to evaluate the effectiveness of this fight in practice. The objectives are to be achieved through the analysis of domestic and international institutional base, legislative measures and their comparison, at least in the essential points, with the French legislation.