

Abstract:

Title: Development and current status of the Rescue Unit of the Czech Republic Fire Rescue Service within the scope of its missions and further activities analysis.

Objective: The objective of this work is the brief description of the development, organisation structure, force and resources and targets of military rescue units and of Rescue Unit of the Czech Republic Fire Rescue Service as their ancestor, all from their origin up to the present day. Furthermore, missions and further activities analysis of Rescue Unit of the Czech Republic Fire Rescue Service with outline of future possible development.

Methods: Diploma work in a theoretical style is focused on the search of available study sources, its background research, collection of publications, articles, conceptual materials, statistic analytical works and other written and electronic records connected to the history of army rescue units and information regarding the present day activity of Rescue Unit of the Czech Republic Fire Rescue Service within the scope of its missions and further activities analysis.

Results: Result of the diploma work is a complete overview of the development and activities of the military rescue units and of the Rescue Unit of the Czech Republic Fire Rescue Service since their origin up to present day. Comprehensive overview on presence of Rescue Unit of the Czech Republic Fire Rescue Service, its missions and further activities with outline of future possible development.

Key words: rescue unit, analysis, firefighters, integrated rescue system, rescue activities.