

Abstract

This bachelor thesis deals with the issues of educational process for parents whose children have undergone haematopoietic stem cell transplantation. At first, the basic information concerning the didactics, educational process and education in general are given. Furthermore, the essential data relating to terminology and issues of haematopoietic stem cell transplantation are presented including the most common topics of education used at the Department of Paediatric Haematology and Oncology in Motol University Hospital in Prague. It is followed by the survey on the awareness of nursing staff at the abovementioned department in the field of educational process. This survey is conducted by means of anonymous questionnaire and the results demonstrating the quality level of educational process are stated. An integral part of the survey is also the proposal of measures that will increase the effectiveness of the educational process in Department of Paediatric Haematology and Oncology in Motol hospital.
