

ABSTRACT

The aim of this thesis is to translate a chapter from Callum MacDonald's The assassination of Reinhard Heydrich and to provide a commentary of the translation, the analysis of the source text based on Christiane Nord's model and the determination of the text's functions and the translation method. In the next chapters, the major translation problems are discussed along with the translation shifts that took place during the translation process.