

ABSTRACT AND KEY WORDS

Social - pedagogical goals of community project concerning minorities

Key words: Community, community work, community project, minority, social - pedagogical goals, semi-structured interview, field examine

The theme of this thesis is community projects in the Czech Republic and their socio-pedagogical goals. The nature of work is theoretical work and research. In the theoretical part are defined basic concepts like community, community work, community project, minority and examples of organizations working with minorities through community projects.

Research is based on semi-structured interviews within field examine, which introduces a view to Organisation Český západ, public participation in the implementation of community projects, what projects are highly relevant, to the skills acquired and in what situations seek the services of this organization in 2015. Their utterances are analyzed and interpreted in relation to individual objectives of this work. On the basis of this examine it was found that for informants was important to be employed. The conclusion summarizes the information from the interviews. Further value added of this thesis is the authentic assessment of direct participants in community projects and personal acquaintance with the opinion spectrum of the population of a small village, socially excluded locality in the Czech Republic.