

Abstract: Equal access to education, its legal framework and protection

Key words: equal access to education, primary school, inclusive education, discrimination

Right to equal access to education is the topic of the diploma thesis of the author. Its aim is to analyze some of the problems of the equal access to education with respect to the primary education. The diploma thesis is divided into five chapters. First chapter is introductory and it describes selected problematics of the primary education in the Czech Republic. In the second chapter the concept and conception of equality and discrimination are examined. Third chapter contains regulation of the Czech primary education. The author tries to analyze the Czech primary education, especially pros and contras of its structure. Next she describes the evolution of the primary education with respect to the new regulation, effective from 1.9.2016. In the fourth chapter the author describes some of the aspects of the entrance proceedings; she especially focuses on the entrance criteria. Fifth chapter is devoted to the possible remedies in administrative proceedings, administrative court proceedings and civil proceedings. It refers to some processual aspects, which can be problematic. In the last chapter the author summarizes her conclusions. To sum it up Czech primary education fulfills the requirement of the equal access to education. However, its processual protection is not efficient.
