Anotation in English language (The tomb stones of 14th century in the territory of czech countries)

This work deals with funeral art of 14th century in the territory of czech countries but in recent area: Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia. There are cca 70 graven and plastic tomb stones in our country. All of them belong to members of higher social class. They belong to nobility and their wives, abbots and abbess of important Monasteries (for example: Cistercians, Benedictines) and canons. So we classify them as profane and religious, next as figural and tomb stones with characteristic attributes or without decoration. The terminology uses the expression „tomb stone“ for the desk covering individual sepulture (graven). The bachelor work uses the heuristic method and gathers available information about this theme. It’s aim is the most complete list of tomb stones from the 14th century, which can be found in our country. It offers a couple of examples of single types of tomb stones.

Graven tomb stones are more common a relatively less expensive form. There are more saved till these days and come from the first half of the 14th century. But the datation is rather unsure. This can be seen in comparison to the tomb stones of the end of the 13th century, as their form is very similar, even the same.

There are no science-discovery ambitions in this work. It just tries to work out a transparent order in the given theme based on till these days published information.
