

Abstract

This thesis focuses to assessment of creation of public political instrument National system of Profession (NSP), which is current database containing description of profession units, skills and competences. This instrument reflects the real situation on the nation Czech labour market. In thesis there is description of creation NSP using Multiple Stream Theory. Attention i also dedicated to some elements of NSP, which are non-functional or they have a different use that the policy makers were intended. Dissertation was wrote based expert interviews with relevant persons and analysis of documents, which are relevant with creation and policy settings of National system of Profession.