Abstract

In my Bacachelor thesis, I'm trying to give a compete overview about women drug usage and addiction.

My target was to get a closer view to a woman with drug addiction, describe specific differences of additive substances and uncover problems of using drugs during pregnancy.

The first part of a theoretical work is dedicated to more general concept like social pathology, drug usage and drug classification. Other chapters are more focused on women addict and drug usage during pregnancy. Practical part uncovers real cases of women using additive substances during pregnancy through case studies while using interview method. Looking inside from the street workers’ perspective.
