

ABSTRACT

This bachelor's thesis describes options and methods for the psycho-physical development of primary school children as well as techniques for facilitating such development. The goal is to share the author's theoretical and practical approach to the topic. Practice directs our attention to perception and movement leads to our ability to develop. We learn how to improve basic body principles.