

Abstract

The main target of this study is to compare content of the news in two radio stations in the Czech Republic. Those include commercial Radio Impuls and public radio Radiozurnal.

Introduction is devoted to theoretical foundations of radio news in our territory. In this part is the history of radio news, definition of radio news, its principles and forms, language style and genres of news program. Based on interviews with the editors of these two radio stations there is characteristic of their news program. The most important part of this work is content analysis. The results of research comparing the orientation and preferences of these radio stations - thematic and local focus and genre forms. The data are shown in each chart.