

Abstract

This bachelor thesis is focused on separatist parties in Canada and Belgium, specifically Vlaams Belang and Parti Québécois. The comparison of those parties is based on their history, structure, success in elections, programme and position in the political system of their regions and countries. Trough the comparison the thesis shows that those two parties are similar only in their language focused separatism.