

This thesis is focused on analysing the content of anti-Semitic materials and its aim is to find out how the amount of such materials was changing in three chosen newspapers which had been legally published in Protectorate Bohemia and Moravia in the period March 1939 – September 1941. Those materials have been divided into categories according to the character of their content. In the thesis, there is mentioned how the amount of anti-Semitic materials changed inside each category. In the conclusion, the single results of each daily are compared here.
