

This work concerns a phenomenon of sexuality and tries to appreciate it in historical context of human thinking. Work takes account of question of researching phenomenon in both evolutionary biology and the Sigmund Freud's psychoanalysis. The author of this work considers these both approaches as inseparable and fully essential for understanding of question of eros in its overall behaviour in history. The goal of work is answering questions under authority of these three spheres of our inquiry. The core of inquiry is dealing with problem of sexuality and concerns with following questions: What sexuality means? What is sexuality based upon? What is arising from it? The author along with honourable reader is finding answers through three spheres and he tries point to contemporary stage of human society and the role of sexuality within society.
