

Abstract

This thesis called „Protection of Personal Rights with Special Focus on Right to Health“ deals with a specific part of the area of personal rights, which protects core values, especially life, health and other human rights. We can find the legislation dealing with protection of personality in regulations of various legal force. This thesis specializes in the analysis of civil law and special regulations, especially the expanding area of medical law. The thesis highlights the dynamic development of the protection of personal rights in the Czech law, especially the expansion of rights and obligations of patients and healthcare staff in connection with the recent recodification of private law.

Nowadays there are a lot of specific legal and illegal interventions to someone's personal rights. The thesis analyzes various methods of protection against this specific illegal interference related to historical consequences and the thesis also contains some ideas, how to change the legislation for the future. It also includes a brief analysis of Czech and foreign judicature, which can help with understanding the comprehensive questions in the area of protection of personal rights.