

Abstract

This thesis named „Bill of exchange proceedings in the Czech Republic“ describes the course of bill of exchange proceedings under the Czech law from its commencement, issuing of a decision on merits till the enforcement of the decision. The thesis focuses on the specifics of the bill of exchange proceedings as a summary proceedings and issues which arise out of it. It deals with problems connected with the new legislation governing from January 1, 2014 the delivery of the judicial order to pay in a form of bill. It looks on the position of a drawee in the hearing where his objections against the judicial order to pay in form of a bill are considered. The thesis deals with the issue of admissibility of objections and the 15 days period to file the objections. It considers the position of drawees – defendants which are in separate joinder of parties on the side of defendants. It also focuses on new institutes connected with deciding about costs of the proceedings.

The first chapter discuss a bill of exchange as a security. The following chapters (second till sixth) in accordance with the course of the proceedings deals with the action with a motion to issue a judicial order to pay in a form of bill, its issuance, delivery and with the hearing of the objections. The activity of the court before issuing the payment order is also discussed. The final chapters describe the remedial measures and enforcement of decisions.
