

Most current algorithms typically lack in robustness to noise or do not handle T-shaped curve joining properly. There is a challenge to not only detect features in the noisy 3D-data obtained from the digital scanners. Moreover, most of the algorithms even when they are robust to noise, they lose the feature information near the T-shaped junctions as the triplet of lines ``confuses" the algorithm so it treats it as a plane.