

Abstract

The aim of this bachelor thesis is to write a commented translation of selected chapters from the book Food Rules: An Eater's Manual by Michael Pollan, which concerns itself with healthy eating. The commentary to the translation includes a description of the translatology method, a translation analysis of the source text, a typology of translation problems and a typology of translation shifts.