

Abstract

The aim of the bachelor thesis is a summary of informations about sign languages in Czech and English introductions to the study of language. This thesis analyses each linguistic book focusing on informations about sign languages, which those books included. Furthermore it focuses on the description of differences in the extent of informations about sign languages in the monitored publication. It also summarizes found informations concerning sing languages and compares informations about sign languages included in Czech and English introductions to the study of language.

Keywords: natural language, sign language, American sign language, sign language primes, Deaf people, first language acquisition