

The study of the alternative media has been an underdeveloped branch of the Czech media studies. This thesis aims both to introduce a functional definition and description of alternative media in general and to contribute to research in this area. The research is focused on organizational routines of the alternative media. The fieldwork was conducted among the editors of Přímá cesta (Direct path), an anarchafeminist magazine based in Prague.