

The Influence of Extracurricular Sport Activities on School Performance of Roma Children Attending Middle Schools in Prague 2

Anotation

This thesis deals with the topic of Extracurricular Sport Activities and the education of Roma children. It describes notions concerning Roma culture and issues, the age group of the target group and notions related to the leisure of a child at middle school. It highlights the function of sport, which serves as a useful way to spend their free time in combination with the school and is also a very beneficial activity affecting the physical, psychological and social condition of humans.

This work also defines the factors affecting the education of Roma children and the importance of their education. It also highlights free time activities, as a tool for crime prevention.

Keywords

Gypsies, racial discrimination, racism, puberty, Roma education, children raising, free time, free time activities, sport and its functions