This thesis deals with basic conditions and creation trends in pursuit of increasing effectivity in funding of social services in the Czech republic. Said trends are distinguished as generally apparent, latent and those followed by decision making government body for administration purposes and in pursuit of sustainability. Time period before 1989 is described mainly as socio-political background for social services funding are based. This thesis is processed as a descriptive and analytical study.