

ABSTRACT

The diploma thesis focuses on the period of the episcopacy of Jan III of Dražice. The aim of the thesis is to describe the economic, political and cultural situation on the basis of analyses, description and comparison of acquired information. The thesis presents the personality of the Prag bishop Jan III of Dražice. It also analyse the administration and property of the Diocese of Prague in the second half of the 13th century. Finally, the thesis focuses on the political activity of the Prag bishop during the government of king Ottokar II. of Bohemia, the court of Jan III and his travel itinerary. The conclusion of the thesis is the recognition that during the period of the episcopacy of Jan III of Dražice the administration of Diocese began to be reorganized, two new episcopal castles were built, the episcopal office started to work and the property of Diocese did not increase. In comparison with the bishop of Olomouc Bruno of Schauenburg, Jan III was not so politically active in the royal policy.
