

Abstract

The topic of bachelor thesis is Analysis of women's life stories and their problems of alcoholism, which I processed by half structured interview. The topic is chosen because of generally skeptical majority view of female's increased consumption of alcohol. This my supposition is confirmed by literature, women's view and results of my research. Woman like a mother, symbol of the family is under bigger pressure and critique of the vicinity. View of their addiction is generally take like a failure. This is why they hide their drinking. The point of this thesis is to prove that in interviews of six random chosen women we will see some kind of violence, maternity power and worsened relationship with men. The theoretical part sketched particular causes of women's alcoholic problem interleaved by their exact citations. The theoretical part is going from exact examples to the general terms like what is alcohol and which are his incidences to health. The theoretical part and the practical section is connected.

Practical section is processed case study of women's life stories, who had or still have some problem with alcohol. By interviews I accumulated informations, which I segmented into three categorie- starters, keep in period and help. This categories include other subcategories. In my bachelor thesis I would like to show that women with some alcohol problem usually suffer some really strong life story and we should work with them with a high tenderness and respect.
