Course of defence: The student has reacted to the comments of the opponent, who has been present. The main comments questioned the choice of factors employed for the analysis of the empirical part. The special emphasis has been put on the reasoning behind the choice of the economical factor. The very free connection between theoretical and methodological part as well as the too suscint discussion of the changes observed as a part of hypothesis have been seen as partial weaknesses of the thesis. Student responded to the presented objections by pointing at the consecutive developpment of his work and by presenting the reasons behind the choice of the analytical factors.
