

Abstract

The Bachelor thesis "New Forms of documentary in the Internet" deals with an interactive web documentary, which was emerged as a new form of documentary work by linking documentary film and the Internet. On the three interactive web documents are applied analysis of narrative structure and analysis of formal elements that specify how these new documentary forms tell the story, how the presence of interactivity is manifested, and how it differs from traditional documentary film. In the theoretical part of the thesis basic terms of documentary, interactivity and narrative structure of interactive projects are introduced. The practical part contains the mentioned analyzes, evaluation and also comparison of the results of the analyzes which prove the different nature and functioning of the selected interactive projects. This work demonstrates their new characteristics and typology, proving that the Internet is developing documentary work not in one but in several directions.
