

Abstract

The thesis deals with the issue of small-classes education in the Czech Republic. It describes the historical development of education in comparison with the present, funding, structure and management of small-classes schools together with the teaching process, methods and forms of teaching. The aim of the practical part is to get information about the positives and negatives of small-classes education from representatives of small-classes education and about the overall functioning of the school.