

Abstract

This thesis is called Social Work With Family In The Risk. The crisis has been understood as a crisis of the family as the institution in nowadays. Thesis is divided into three parts. In the first I'm describing the basics of social work with the family. Then I'm describing definitions and functions of a family according to opinions of several authors. There are also being open topics about homoparentality and crisis of the family in 21. century. Separate chapter is about theories of the family, being described by the run of different times and events which were forming the statute of the family till nowadays.

The aim of the research part was to find out what are the opinions about chosen factors which are influencing the crisis of family. The research part was done by using a method of questionnaire. The research was done on the Theological faculty of Jan Hus at Charles University in Prague during the April in the year 2017, responded by the group of thirty students.

About this topic I found democratic and open minded, students are aware of modern technologies are influencing the course of a family life. There has been also found out that individualism is not that common in families and mostly preferred are interests of the whole family than family members separately, what shows some signs of liberalisation of those relationships. Strong emotional connection between family members is nowadays more and more common than it used to be in a past. Lengthening of the time of studying is not influencing the time of starting building own families. Not really strictly saying has the result about the part of finding out where are people spending most of the time, there is a one point difference between an option -with family and with friends, therefore there is not a clear result. At the end of the thesis we found out, that the family was, has been, is and probably still will be in crisis which will be forming the shape of family in the future time.
