

Abstract

The thesis deals with the development of commercial health insurance for foreigners living in the Czech Republic between 2014-2016. The study describes the process of the creation of commercial health insurance policy for foreigners in the defined period and conducts an analysis of the involved actors.

The thesis is based on the theory of multilevel governance, the theory of advocacy coalition framework, and institutional theory. The methods of critical discourse analysis and institutional analysis were used in the research.