

Abstract

The task of this bachelor thesis is to clarify the progress of Albanian-Yugoslav relations at the end of World War II and instantly after it, specifically until 1948, when the conflict between Stalin and Tito broke out, which cooled relations between Albania and Yugoslavia. The thesis concerns with their cooperation during World War II, when relations between these two countries we can consider as very good, resulting in the interconnection of Albania and Yugoslavia. However, this has never happened, and after the conflict between Stalin and Tito, relations have worsened.