

Abstract:

This thesis focuses on changes and settlement of the southmoravian borderland after the second world war. Main attention is dedicated to group of villages Božice, Břežany, Čejkovice and Mackovice in district Znojmo. For our purposes too serve the questions about the settlement authorities and their working or the role of decreets of the president as main law documents for this task. In the monitored villages is as main subsistence the agriculture, so in big part of this thesis we focus on problems in agriculture that new people in borderland had for some years after their arrival.
