

Containing both theoretical and empirical parts, the thesis examines the largest translation project in history: translation of EC/EU legislation into Czech and other languages of candidate countries before the 2004 EU enlargement. It focuses on project management and organization and analyses activities, roles, powers, interests and responsibilities of all actors involved in the translation process.