

Abstract

This work focuses on civic engagement of parents, especially in the field of inclusion in education. In my work I will deal with the civic engagement of parents in inclusive education and try to find out the ways in which parents engage in education. I will also deal here with the theoretical concepts that are related to my work, such as inclusion or civic engagement. I will focus my work primarily on the "parent for inclusion" alliance that parents created to support their and other children and their parents in regular schools. The Alliance will deal with both the theoretical and the practical aspects. The practical part of my work is qualitative, and as a method I chose interviews with members of the alliance. I found out how parents engaged and answered all my research questions.
