Abstract

The presented rigorosum thesis is focused on the field of alternative measures to prison sentence in Czech law, including set institutes whose primary objective is replacing prison sentence, their arrangement and mutual relations, and is further focused on related issues. The thesis is divided into eight major chapters further divided into smaller subchapters. The first half of the thesis is focused on the concept and main principals on which the alternative measures are based. The second half is dedicated to specification of individual alternative punishment methods, while it does not only describe them but also assesses their positives and shortcomings.
