This bachelor thesis deals with the topic of multicouple conjoint therapy for couples in which occurs common couple violence. This thesis is divided into two parts: theoretical and practical. The theoretical part firstly deals with the concept of common couple violence as the basis for this kind of therapy. Then it introduces current arguments for and against using this therapy. Part of this thesis are some of the researches made on this therapy. In the practical part, there is suggested research on comparing results of the multicouple therapy to the individual conjoint therapy.
