

Abstract

This diploma thesis deals with architecture and town planning of a two settlements Zahradní Město (Garden City) and Záběhlice. The text is divided to the two main parts according to the topic. The first of them deals with a development of Záběhlice from its beginnings in 11th century to present. The second part is about the construction of Zahradní Město which had several phases: terraced houses from 1920s, apartment blocks in 1950s and high-rised blocks form 1960s and 1970s. At the beginning of 21st century there were realized another new projects near Botič. This thesis is focused on changes of local architecture. A part of the thesis is also a brief description of development of architecture between two world wars and there is also a short description of panel technology which was used there.

Keywords

Záběhlice, Zahradní Město, architecture, housing estate, urbanism